CALL FOR PAPERS

Global transformations have an impact on their sociological and public interpretations. The conference theme Social Relations in Turbulent Times therefore invites social theorists to explore the theoretical underpinnings of the debate about the historical roots and the social impact of the dramatic current global turbulences. - Not foreseeing the worst economic crisis of the present globalized era, economists are often blamed for having lost sight of social reality. But have sociologists done better? Didn't major contemporary sociologists eclipse the economy in their analyses since the discipline moved from the social to the cultural paradigm?

Papers that address the general conference theme will be particularly welcome. Contemporary and classical theory, both will be relevant. We further invite proposals that will contribute to our ongoing debates (streams, s. below) or introduce new ideas to our network members and conference participants. Thematic sessions will be arranged based on the supply of papers and themes. In addition to the "General Submission: RN29 - Social Theory" category that you will find online (online submission system) we encourage submissions addressing the following themes, that also continue our ongoing discussions:

Social Relations in Turbulent Times

1. The Global Economic Crisis and Social Theory
2. Time, Future and Politics

Abstract submission

Web submission of abstracts will be open on Monday, 10th Jan. 2011 and will be closed on Tuesday, 08th March (extended), 2011 (automatically available to the Conference organizers & the RN coordinators).

Abstracts will only be accepted through completion of the online submission form (available from <http://www.esa10thconference.com>) and submission in any other form will be declined.

Abstracts should not exceed 200 words. Proposals will be evaluated and selected by the Research Network.

Session slots will be of 1.5 hours duration. There will be no more than 4 papers to be presented in each session (allocated time per presentation: 20 min. incl. discussion). Session chairs will be prepared for the real role of moderator, including the active promotion of debate.

Accommodation, registration, etc.

We are looking forward to see participants of previous meetings but welcome warmly new colleagues too. Regarding theory, the RN supports the cognitive identity of sociology; institutionally, the RN offers spaces for debate and communication as well as a platform for research collaboration. – If you would like to be on our RN mailing list, send a note to this effect to the RN29 coordinator. All further inquiries are welcomed too.
